Students and officials examine noise issue

By GREGG SCHROEDER
Staff Writer

Cal Poly and San Luis Obispo city officials reached some tentative agreements Oct. 23 on modifying the proposed noise ordinance, including coming up with a more realistic decibel level standard of infraction.

The proposed noise ordinance currently says noise infractions will be measured with a decibel meter, and if it exceeds 55 decibels, the party making the noise will be fined.

Linda Eberl, Associated Students, Inc. community affairs representative, said city officials "realized what they have (regarding the 55 decibel level) is extremely low."

To find a more realistic decibel level, Eberl and other students will ride along with police officers when they are called out on noise infractions. They will take decibel meter readings in order to adjust the level to something the city officials and the university committee can work with.

Eberl said the city council "realized that the ordinance will affect students most of all" and is willing to work with them.

Eberl said the committee also expressed its concern over the application for a waiver. The present form of the ordinance allows people to get permission to exceed the legal noise level for special events, but the ordinance does not set criteria for how to get a permit.

City Attorney Roger Picquet told the committee he would draw up criteria for exemption and present it to the committee.

Eberl said she did not think the city council will include a warning in the ordinance. As the proposed ordinance stands, whether to warn or cite violators is up to the discretion of the police officer.

Eberl said there is still the chance that officers will not warn on the first offense.

"No one will know what their decibel level is," Eberl said.

Eberl said the next step is to ride with police officers on noise infraction calls and then have another meeting with city officials.

If the proposed measure passes, Eberl said she "would like to see the ordinance (implemented) on a trial basis and then review it" to make adjustments.

"We are working with the city," Eberl said. "We are stressing the benefits of students (to the community)."

"All in all it was a good meeting," Eberl said.

Poly sees car run on methanol

By MICHAEL MARTER
Staff Writer

Cal Poly students learned the advantages of methanol fuel as an alternative to petroleum-based fuels when a member of the California Energy Commission visited industrial technology classes Tuesday.

Jerry Wiens, energy specialist for the commission, drove to San Luis Obispo in a methanol fueled Ford Escort, part of a fleet program designed to test alternative fuels. The commission is monitoring nearly 1,000 methanol fueled cars in California currently being used by the state government and private fleets.

Wiens explained that wide use of methanol depends on cooperation and coordination between both automakers and fuel companies — something that is not likely to happen, he said. The commission implemented the Alcohol Fleet Test Program in an effort to bring the two parties together.

"We felt methanol's advantages needed a demonstration," said Wiens. "Government has an active role in making it (wide scale use of methanol) happen."

Wiens said the California legislature saw the state crippled by the energy crises of 1973-74 and 1979 — with only a three to five percent shortage of fuel. The state could no longer take a cheap and abundant supply of petroleum products for granted, Wiens said. In 1979 the California Energy Commission was allocated $10 million to study alternative fuels, of which $2.1 million went to the alcohol fuel program.

The total known petroleum reserves would last only a matter of years, Wiens said, if no new reserves were found and fuel use technology was not improved. But methanol reserves, or the substances used for its manufacture, would last 400 years with existing technology.

The commission sees methanol research and production as the key to California's energy independence, Wiens said.

The commission enlisted the technical help of Ford and Volkswagen of America in the Alcohol Fleet Test Program. The different phases of the program have used Ford Pintos, Volkswagen Rabbits and pickups and Ford Escorts. The commission is currently evaluating a fleet of 500 Escorts. The car Wiens drove to Cal Poly was part of that fleet.

Besides being a gasoline replacement in cars, methanol can also be used in diesel trucks and buses, for heating oil, and to supplement and help purify the combustion process in oil-burning power plants. The clean burning characteristics of methanol are especially beneficial in these heavily polluting applications, Wiens said.

Methanol, or methyl alcohol, can be produced from any resource containing carbon that can be gassified, Wiens said. Methanol is currently being produced from natural gas by all but one manufacture in the U.S. which uses coal. Methanol is available at 18 stations in California and retails for about 71 cents per gallon.

Methanol usually increases the performance of cars converted from gasoline, and large performance gains can be made with additional modifications. Race cars, such as those racing at the Indianapolis 500, have long run on methanol.

Converting a car to run on methanol is not especially practical for most models, Wiens said, but producing cars to run on methanol from the outset is economically viable. Although the engine of Wiens' Escort was internally modified, he said the modifications were not absolutely necessary for the car to run on methanol.

Hollywood celebrities to rally for Democrats at Poly

By DONALD MUNRO
Staff Writer

Defeating Ronald Reagan in the Nov. 6 election is the goal of three Hollywood celebrities who will speak on campus Friday.

Susan Dey, Trish Van Devere and Lila Garrett are members of the Gender Gap Action Committee, a national organization formed in September that is trying to encourage women to vote against Reagan. They will speak at 11 a.m.

in the University Union Plaza.

Dey was known to television viewers in the early 1970s as "Laurie" on the television series "The Partridge Family." She recently appeared in the television series "Emerald Point N.A.S." and has appeared in a number of feature films and made-for-television films.

Van Devere has appeared in a number of feature films, including "Where's Poppa," "Movie Movie," and won best actress honors at the

Canadian Film Awards for her role in "The Changeling."

Garrett is a producer, writer and director, and has received four television Emmy awards.

On Friday, the three women will explain why they feel the gender gap is important and why it is necessary to defeat Reagan, said Jeanne Chizek, president of the Cal Poly Young Democrats.

"It's a full out campaign to get the women's vote in the November election," said Chizek. "If anyone can upset Reagan, women can."

The Gender Gap Action Committee is a national organization that is focusing on key states and districts in an effort to bring out the female vote. Dey, Van Devere and Garrett have been speaking at different college campuses in the past weeks to promote their views, said Chizek.

The Friday event is sponsored by the Cal Poly Young Democrats.

Political emotions heat up

The presidential election is fast approaching (Tuesday, Nov. 6), and all around campus roommates, friends, enemies and acquaintances are arguing, discussing and debating which presidential candidate to vote for.

A look at yesterday's Mustang Daily reflects the political thoughts circulating through the campus as election day draws close.

On the front page, the lead story says that students on campus will get a chance to vote for president in a mock election which will be held today between 9 a.m. and 3:30 p.m. in the University Union Plaza.

We encourage participation in the mock election.

We believe it will help provide information for an interesting study by the Cal Poly Historical Society.

But, on the flip side, when we turn to the last page of the paper, we see a disturbing sign of what the political season brings.

In the classified ads section there is an ad that challenges the College Republicans to debate the Young Democrats.

The name of the person listed in the ad as a contact says she never placed the ad.

Apparently, someone is up to some mischief.

It reminds us of an incident that took place on Monday.

Buildings on the campus of The University of California at Santa Barbara were spray-painted with anti-Reagan slogans.

We understand that during these political times, tempers do flare and people get very emotional, but that's no excuse for acting like immature fools.

It doesn't take any brains or any courage to run false classified ads.

And, on a grander scale, it doesn't take any brains to be dogmatic for one candidate or the other without being informed about the issues.

While we encourage discussion of the issues and activism in the election process, we condemn these acts of irrational behavior.

Letters

Student angry with recent views on Prop 39

Editor:

I am concerned about the flood of slanted "facts" on Proposition 39. The thing that upsets me most is the constant bombardment of totally irrelevant and slanted "NO on 39" television commercials. But before we can make any fair judgment, let's face reality and look at exactly what Prop 39 is all about as it is stated on the ballot.

A State Constitutional Amendment — REAPPORTIONMENT — Provides reapportioning Senate, Assembly, Congressional, Equalization districts for 1986 and subsequent elections by new commission composed of former justices.

In other words Prop 39 would take the job of redrawing district lines away from the State Legislature. It would be the job of a commission of RETIRED Supreme Court and appellate justices. To give fair representation to the people, the commission would be required to hold public hearings on decisions before they become final.

These TV commercials try to imply total absurdities; and they air, it seems, every few hours, on every station, and would appear to be funded by the Democrat/Liberal constituency. They talk about political cronies and machines, with judges in smoke-filled rooms, surrounded by mobster looking thugs with fat cigars. How stupid do they (the opponents of 39) think we are? Fact 1: The commercial says judges would be dragged from the courtroom to the political back room. Well let's remember this is a non-partisan commission of retired judges, they're not on the bench anymore nor running for reelection themselves. Fact 2: The Democrat-controlled legislature has proven its incompetence and political intentions by the way they have gerrymandered the districts to their political advantage — not the advantage of the people who live in their district.

I would also like to comment on the remarks made by Jeff Hunt (co-chairman of Cal Poly Students for Mondale/Ferraro) on Prop. 39, in the Oct. 22 Mustang Daily. "Proposition 39 is definitely backed by the Republican party." Very good, Jeff. Now you can see (maybe) that Gov. Deukmejian and the Republicans are trying to make districts fair to the people, not advantageous to the party like the Democrats! Hunt also went on to say that, "The supporters of Proposition 39 are the ones with the most to gain passes." You get this one wrong, Jeff. The people of the state are the ones with the most to gain.

This initiative would stop gerrymandering that Vi Brown and the Democrats in the State Legislature have done, taking out conservative areas from their districts to assure reelection. Yes, Republicans are too, but that's why Prop. 39 is important. Stop all political gerrymandering by the Legislature — and make these districts fair to those who the legislature is supposed to represent, the people of the state of California! I urge all to vote YES on Prop 39!

Mondale criticized for promises

Editor:

After watching Walter Mondale on T.V. recently, I have noticed that Mr. Mondale seems to have solutions to the many problems facing this country today. His name sounds very familiar. Let me see if I remember correctly. Oh yes, Walter Mondale was vice president from 1976-80. In that time, inflation rose to 14 percent, unemployment was almost 11 percent, and the prime interest rate was somewhere around 22 percent. Oh yes, I almost forgot, there was also a terrible crisis in Iran, American citizens abroad had been kidnapped and held hostage by a foreign power, and we Americans at home watched on T.V. as the American flag burned in Tehran. We were helpless.

So, in 1980, Ronald Reagan was overwhelmingly elected by an electorate who viewed the Carter/Mondale ticket as weak, ineffective and without real solutions to our problems.

President Reagan brought in the use of supply-side economics — designed specifically to control the high rate of inflation. In three years President Reagan has brought down the inflation rate to 3.8 percent, an incredibly low rate. Unemployment is now as low as it has ever been since the Korean War. As of this moment, the prime rate is 12.7 percent. The American dollar is probably as strong as it has ever been. In short, an amazing turn of events. Simply amazing.

My questions are these: What were Mr. Mondale's ideas or plans for America in 1979 that so many people were unhappy with? Are these the same plans/ideas that he is proposing for the country now, in 1984?

If so — AMAZING, SIMPLY AMAZING!

Reader defends redistricting

Editor:

Richard L. Nelson, a 1984 graduate now working in Washington, D.C., wrote an article in the Daily on Tuesday, Oct. 23 about Proposition 39. Some of his points are so fallacious that they should be exposed. Then, the students can see the real Proposition 39. He says that the present system allows for public input but does not mention that the legislators have not been influenced by public input; otherwise, there would not be districts such as we have now. In southern California there is one district that stretches from the Pacific Ocean to the Nevada border. There is no way one legislator can serve this diverse population fairly. He points out that the retired judges would have their political views also. What he does not point out is that in the present system the redistricting is controlled by the majority party. Under Prop 39, half of the judges would have to have been appointed by a governor who was a Democrat and half by a Republican governor. This is not "politicizing the judiciary," as Nelson says it is. Prop 39 cannot be called a partisan political ploy when there will be an equal number of Democrats and Republicans on the committee. I urge you to join with Gov. George Deukmejian in voting YES on Proposition 39.

Grenada is remembered

Editor:

The first anniversary of the liberation of Grenada is Oct. 25, 1984. It was only through the swift and decisive action of President Reagan that 600 American medical students were rescued and the 85,000 citizens of Grenada were freed from subjugation by Cuba and the Soviet Union.

It should certainly be a day of pride for all Americans. The United States responded to the plea of small, free and democratic nations in the Eastern Carribean. Seldom has so much good will been generated toward the United States.

Found on Grenada were enough Soviet and Eastern bloc arms to equip an army of over 10,000 men. Also found were documents detailing the plans of the Soviet Union and Cuba to use Grenada as a base for subversion against Grenada's neighbors, some of whom don't even have armies.

The United States acted quickly and firmly in the face of an immediate threat to its nationals and the citizens of Grenada. By doing so, this crisis was dealt with before it became a major conflict involving the entire Carribean. That is what should be remembered on Grenada Day.

Poly's first male twirler

By DONALD MUNRO

Staff Writer

It's halftime at a home football game, and thousands of spectators are watching the Cal Poly Mustang Marching Band put on another spirited halftime show. As the band stands on the field playing a song, all eyes are on the featured baton twirler as he dazzles the audience with his routine.

That's right, for the first time since Band Director William Johnson came to Cal Poly in 1966, the marching band has a male baton twirler featured in its halftime shows.

Greg Owens isn't a stranger to a baton or marching bands, having twirled for seven years. He has twirled for Cal State Northridge, was assistant drum major at UCLA, and was in the marching band at Ohio State University.

"I taught myself to twirl when I was 17," said Owens, who is in his first quarter at Poly. Now 24, he took up the activity in high school because he thought it would be a good way to keep physically fit.

"I just did it for the exercise," he said.

For Owens, baton twirling is a great way to stay in shape, and it also sharpens his mental concentration. "It's an excellent sport for hyper people."

As twirler for the Cal Poly band, his main goal is to please the crowd and add another visual dimension to the band's performance.

Owens' routines include both gymnastics and twirling, with a main emphasis put on impressing the audience visually.

In baton twirling, it's possible to perform extremely intricate routines that no one would ever guess were difficult — routines that are better suited to national baton twirling championships than football halftime shows.

Owens tries to stay away from those routines in favor of ones that please the crowd.

"It's more impressive to a crowd if you do a high aerial than a low aerial with three spins," he explained.

It's also important for Owens not to drop the baton. In baton twirling competitions, dropping the baton accounts for only a minor reduction in the final score.

But in front of thousands of fans at a halftime show, catching the baton after a high aerial toss is extremely important.

"All they're concerned with is if you catch it," he laughed.

He does manage to catch it most of the time, and for that he draws upon his years of marching band experience.

While attending Ohio State, Owens took lessons in baton twirling from the drum major there. When he decided he wanted to change schools, he drove thousands of miles across the country to different college campuses, trying out for the position of featured baton twirler.

He tried out at Indiana University, Louisiana State University, San Diego State University, the University of Utah, New Mexico State University and UCLA.

At each school he was offered a marching band scholarship. But in the end, he decided he wanted to head west to California and attend UCLA.

He had visited the UCLA campus when Ohio State played the Bruins in the Rose Bowl, and he liked what he saw.

He became the assistant drum major at UCLA, and is still the featured baton twirler for the UCLA alumni band. After taking some time off from school to work for an accounting firm, he transferred to Cal State Northridge before coming to Cal Poly.

Male baton twirlers aren't as popular on the West Coast as in the Midwest. "They're not as common out here," Owens said.

"At Ohio State they don't even have female baton twirlers," he added.

Band Director William Johnson said Owens really shows what a male baton twirler can do. Baton twirlers are usually thought of as women, but it doesn't have to be that way, Johnson said.

"I think he's terrific. He's doing a beautiful job," said Johnson.

Besides his duties as baton twirler, Owens has also taken on the responsibility of helping drum major Jill Vaughn drill the band on the field.

He's also constantly working on improving his routine, and has plans for an even more exciting show for the rest of the home football games this season. One of his goals is to use three batons instead of two in his routine, and to twirl fire.

"The hardest part is getting over the fear of catching on fire," he said.

SEEING YOUR POTENTIAL

Just as a master diamond cutter can see the potential in an uncut stone, NEC can see the potential in the individual about to graduate from college.

Putting that belief into action has enabled us to become the third largest semiconductor manufacturer in the world. And we're growing stronger all the time.

For the emerging graduate we offer an environment that develops new facets to your current capabilities, which will take you from the novice to a top professional in the semiconductor field.

For instance, the growth opportunities at our Roseville facility (just outside Sacramento) are exceptional. This state-of-the-art VLSI manufacturing plant will be the largest and most advanced wafer fab operation in the U.S. It will supplement our successful Mountain View, California operation as well as our Technology Center in Natick, Massachusetts. This center, with over 80 engineers is a unique institution where semiconductor technologies developed in the U.S., Japan, and Europe are combined, enhanced, and applied to the needs of the U.S. market.

We're looking for dynamic people who respond to the challenge of putting their scholastic skills to the test. This is the opportunity to become a polished professional in the diverse world of NEC.

On Monday, November 5, NEC will be holding OPEN INTERVIEWS at the Placement Office for the following majors:

- English
- Computer Science

Club to show experimental film

ANNE ALBERTA

Writer
The Cal Poly Ecology Action Club will present the film "Tools of Research" tonight. The film is about how animals are used in laboratory research and will be shown at 7:00 p.m. in Science North, room 215.
There is little regulation in the laboratory research industry," said Rowntree, vice-president of Ecology Action Club. "Animals are often subjected to unfair tests. I mean, how many times do researchers have to blind rabbits to see that a certain eye makeup is safe."
Rowntree said that 60-200 animals die every year in experiments. He also stated that although the Food and Drug Administration requires a large random sample before approval of a drug, many animal experiments are not necessary.

"Many times the animals are not properly anesthetized in order to cut costs," Rowntree explained. "The Army was lashed out against for shooting a dog in the leg as a demonstration for paramedics. I guess they were supposed to learn something about injuries from that, but I think that a half-decent actor could have taken the dog's place."
The Ecology Action Club is working to establish a National Library of Medicine which will keep records of experiments conducted on animals. The library will ensure that experiments will not be unnecessarily duplicated.

"Another one of our goals is that everyone who comes to the film will write postcards to their congressmen requesting changes in animal research," added Rowntree. "We know that testing is needed, but perhaps synthetic substances and other chemical bodies besides animals could be used."
"We live in a very complex world and we take many things for granted — sometimes we can also be very apathetic," Rowntree admitted. "I hope that the people who attend our presentation will take a hard look at how lab experiments are conducted on animals."

Reagan masks hot items, Nixon masks also selling

BOSTON (AP) — Forget ghouls and goblins. This Halloween, the spirit of the country's largest costume shop says Reagan and Nixon masks are selling like crazy, along with Michael Jackson gloves for $4.95 a shot.
T and his gold chains are popular, but remarkably few buyers want to look like Walter Dale or Geraldine Ferraro.
Reagan is a very, very big seller. "We sell about 12 a day, more than that," David Beron said Wednesday at his store, The Jack Horner Inc. "The other day someone from Mondale headquarters came down and bought a Nixon mask. Don't know what plan to do with it."
Nixon is hot. Easily as popular as Reagan," Bertolino said. "Less people still love to hate. Sometimes they come in and buy the Nixon mask and then buy cuffs or a ball-and-chain to go with it."
This year is Little Jack Horner's year in business in downtown Boston. As usual, says Bertolino, political costumes are making him money. The masks of President Reagan and former President Nixon sell for $25 to $40, depending on the amount of detail in the costume.

So far, he says, only a few people have sought a Mondale mask or one of his running mate.
Upstairs in the store's costume shop, saleswoman Donna Dauria noted that religious costumes are extremely popular this Halloween, with nuns' habits renting for $30 and priests' robes $20.
An outfit modeled on "Elvira" — a late-night TV hostess who dresses as a sexy vampire — is probably the biggest selling costume, she says, "for both men and women."
Shiny, decorated Michael Jackson jackets, epaulets and all, are selling fast among teen-agers, Ms. Dauria added. And college students frequently request costumes based on the hit movie "Ghostbusters."
"I notice a lot of people come in asking to see our Boy George costume," she said of the English pop singer who dresses like a woman, "but no one wants to rent it."

Panetta to speak here

By KAREN ELLICHMAN
Staff Writer

Congressman Leon Panetta (D-15th District) will speak today at 12:30 in the University Union, Room 220.
Panetta is running for re-election against Republican candidate Patricia Ramsey. He will give a brief speech and will take questions from the audience, according to journalism major Lynette Frediani, co-leader of the local Students for Mondale-Ferraro campaign.
Panetta has served on the House Agriculture and House Budget Committees during his congressional terms and he is one of the main supporters of the Simpson-Mezzoli bill, Frediani said.

Horse(shoe)in' around with MONTE MILLS

It's what most everyone does with SLO's western swing king

By LISA MCKINNON
Staff Writer

Cal Poly and the city share many traditions, from WOW tours of the city's "sewers" to the massive influx of tourists drawn here for Poly Royal.

Add to the list the musical tradition of Monte Mills and the Lucky Horseshoe Band.

If there's an aggie stomp in the offing, Mills and the band are sure to be there to provide the music.

"We like to promote aggie stomps as part of the Cal Poly experience," said Mills, 38 years old, the group's organizer and rhythm guitarist.

Indeed, posters advertising the group's dances read, "Welcome to Cal Poly, Western Swing Dance Center of California."

A fixture of the local entertainment scene since 1976, the country-western band is a favorite for campus and community occasions alike.

The band's regular Thursday night gig at McClintock's Saloon on Higuera always draws an enthusiastic crowd, as do its Poly Royal appearances.

Mills said they've played for just about every organization that could hire them—and then some. The group frequently plays at charity events.

With three albums to its credit, the six-member band's reputation has spread. Last May, they were asked by Gov. George Deukmejian to perform at a barbecue he was hosting, and they were featured entertainers at a private barbecue held for Kenny Rogers and his band.

The Lucky Horseshoe Band had rather humble beginnings, however.

It started when three guitar-picking friends, all horseshoers by trade, got together every Thursday and Saturday night to play country-western music at McClintock's Saloon. For lack of any other name, the group simply went by "Monte Mills."

"It was quite a menagerie back then of whoever I could collect up to play with us," Mills recalled. "Some nights we'd have a fiddler, others someone would sit in with a harmonica."

After one album and an increasing number of song requests, Mills knew it was time to get a regular backup group. And a name.

Some of the group's new members joined as a result of the impromptu performances Mills mentioned earlier. Harmonica player Mike Caldwell is a good example.

"Mike's sister was singing with us a while back, and one night at a barn dance she asked if we'd let her baby brother play along on the harmonica," Mills said.

"Well, up comes this fat little 15-year-old stepping up onto stage with his knees shaking to pieces. He was real scared. But when that kid started to play, he blew us all away. He's got this big diaphragm gut that can really get some dynamic stuff out," Mills continued.

Mills was impressed, as was the audience, and asked Caldwell first to play on the band's next album and then to join the band permanently. Caldwell stayed on from 1978 to 1981, when he went on the road with The Shoppe, an opening act for Alabama, the Oak Ridge Boys, Barbara Mandrell and Roy Clark.

Life on tour wore Caldwell down and he returned to the San Luis Obispo area to teach banjo and harmonica and to rejoin the band. Mills was glad to have him back.

"Without a doubt, Caldwell is in the top three harmonica players in the world," Mills said.

Fiddler Allan Dick, a Santa Maria stockbroker, has been with the band from the start, but there have been several changes in band members. One addition was drummer Bob Huddle, an English teacher at San Luis Obispo High School.

Despite the changes in the times and the players, Mills maintains the music his group plays has stayed the same. "Basically the band plays country music, a lot of Merle Haggard. We try to stay pre-1960s country, the '30s to the present," he said. "I'm the first to admit that we're not real current. However, the guitar player has a rock and roll background and sometimes we can get to sounding sort of rockabilly if we're not careful!"

Mills said that he likes to stick to plain danceable music people already know. His regular play-list includes "San Antonio Rose", "Tennessee Waltz", and his own "Auctioneer's Song," a throwback to his job as an auctioneer while in college.

Mills said besides giving band T-shirts with strategically placed horseshoes on the front to the more buxom ladies in the audience, what he likes best about the band is how well they all get along.

"Our band is like a family," he explained. "There is never a cross word—probably because we never rehearse!"

When the group does want to add a new song to the play list, they will usually go through it shortly before a dance goes full-swing. "I think 'fumble' is the word to describe it," Mills said with a laugh. "Dances don't really get going until 10 p.m. or so, so before everyone arrives we'll butcher one up at 9 p.m."

"We can be relaxed and have fun," Mills added. "There is no real pressure, except when someone yells, 'Boo! Play Marshall Tucker!'"

Mills, who came to San Luis Obispo in 1972 to take over a friend's horseshoeing business, said he learned how to sing by listening to the radio. He had never even picked up a guitar until 1970, when he won one in a talent contest held in an Oxnard bar.

Despite the success this "relative newcomer" to show business has had with his home-grown band, Mills still spends his days as a horseshoer traveling around in a red and silver truck.

Yet, Mills said he has always had a soft spot for music—especially when he's playing it for others.

"I like the feedback of people enjoying themselves," he said. "We try never to have a dull moment. We like to play on the hormonal action that goes on at a dance, especially for college kids. It's fun to be a part of all that."

Closet comedians, dust off your jokes. William Randolph's Restaurant is featuring an amateur comedy night on Wednesday, Nov. 7.

The winner gets a $50 prize and a three- to five-minute opening for professional comedians.

The restaurant just finished its second weekend of comedy shows. Featured recently were comedians who performed previously at the Comedy Store in Los Angeles and a comedian working out of San Jose.

Restaurant manager Terry Boal is confident the comedy shows will become a part of the mainstream in San Luis Obispo. "The comedians are excellent quality, and there's nothing like it in the area," Boal said.

The comedy shows will appear the first weekend of every month. Amateur night will be the first Thursday if the community shows interest. A comedian from New Jersey opened a recent show. Rick Corso is a former employee of Diablo Canyon. He recently performed at the Comedy Store in Los Angeles. Corso entertained the audience with impressions.

Carl Ray of San Jose was next to take the stage. Ray's style was smooth as he gently drew the audience into laughter.

As the evening wore on the laughter grew to a constant roar. But were the comedians really telling better jokes or was the alcohol taking its effect?

The ever-present hecklers were also heard amid the laughter. It was evident the comedian who lacks crowd control can't survive in the business.

A Los Angeles comedian with movie appearances to his credit completed the show. Angelo Salazar arrived on stage wearing an old black sweatjacket and snug leather pants. Salazar directed his jokes to individuals in the audience. Some in the audience tried to defend themselves, others blushed, but Salazar still had their attention.

Salazar finished his performance by scampering across the stage in gold speedos (stuffed with dollar bills for the Chippendales effect) and high-top sequined tennis shoes.

All ages made up the audience but Cal Poly students filled most of the seats.

Cyndi Block, 20, a junior fashion merchandising major, thought the show was "hysterical." "It's much better than doing homework," she said. "It's a little bit of Los Angeles in San Luis."

"The show was great. It was well worth the money," said Stan Nakaso, a 21-year-old Industrial Technology major.

Reggae musician Bob Marley, shown here at a concert at the Santa Barbara Bowl, will receive a tribute during the Afro-Jamaican Video Festival at the Monday Club.

Tribute to Bob Marley slated

By LISA MCKINNON
Staff Writer

The rolling beat of reggae music is coming to San Luis Obispo during the Afro-Jamaican Video Festival, and will include a special tribute to Bob Marley.

The tribute is slated for 8 p.m. tonight at the Monday Club downtown as part of the World Music Festival.

According to Charlie Goodman, a KCBX disc jockey who hosts "Rhythm, Rock and Reggae," and "Radio Free Obispo," it's a beat that is becoming increasingly popular in this area.

"The purpose of the festival is to break down all the barriers put up between ourselves and other people, state to state and country to country," Goodman said. "Music transcends all that. It is necessary, in order to save the world, to transcend differences and to discover how much in common we have with others."

Goodman added that now that Cal Poly is showing concern for the problems of Third World countries, interests in the music of those countries has increased. "Cal Poly students are now looking into solving more than just producing beef and getting the same teachers," Goodman said.

Goodman said that until now there was little opportunity to "get the music out," but with the advent of satellite dishes and video production, the reggae scene has picked up a large following outside the Third World.

"I no longer feel as if I'm in San Luis Obispo County," Goodman said because of the increasing number of reggae groups touring America who have stopped in the area.

The Afro-Jamaican Video Festival, part of the seven day World Music Festival being celebrated in various locations throughout the Tri-Counties since Oct. 21, will add to that feeling, Goodman said.

Rare videos of Marley in action are the central focus of the festival to be narrated by Roger Steffens, recognized as a leading authority on Marley's life and work.

The Afro-Jamaican Video Festival will also include videos that spotlight other major stars of the reggae movement.

The Monday club is at 1815 Monterey St. Tickets cost $5, and are available at all the usual ticket outlets as well as at the door.

Keeping up with the Joneses

After two years without running, Jones works his way back in form

By M. MILLER

After his first three races this season, Jones displayed his potential as a runner, but last Saturday Kevin Jones put on his running shoes and proved he's got what it takes to place sixth overall and for Cal Poly at the third annual Cal Poly SLO Men's and Women's Cross Country Invitational with a time of 24:31.

"I've had a bad season so far, but I was pleased with the last race—really pleased," Jones said.

Jones was plagued with a chronic lack of time. With working up to 45 hours a week, carrying 12 units and driving 80 miles each week, the 24-year-old rarely got his quota of hours. Jones said that he over-committed himself to work and to other things. "Now that I am working, I'm training better."

After three bad races, I knew I had to rest. I needed this race to restore my confidence. It was a great feeling. There was only one collegiate athlete who beat me and he was a Division I athlete.

Jones's priorities have changed. He told him what his goals are for the national meet Nov. 3 at the University of California, Riverside. He wants to win Regionals, and to be the top 10 or to win the national title," he answered quickly.

In order to meet his goals, Jones has to back his hours to a mere 28-30. In the middle of the training season, runners begin what is called a taper. The runners cut back on the grueling training of the previous season to let their bodies rest. Since the taper Jones puts in between 60 and 70 miles each week. "It's hard to call him lazy,"

Jones ran for Cal Poly in 1980 and 1981. He dropped out of school this year. "I didn't want to end my last collegiate season," he said. It's an all or nothing shot for Jones. This is his last year of eligibility and his last chance at winning an All-American.

All-Americans are chosen by their rankings at the national meet held in Mississippi this year.

Some athletes don't like to travel for meets. It breaks their routine, Jones said that he likes to travel especially to an important one. "You know you've been everywhere when you go to a race that."

Jones is originally from Queens, New York. After graduating from Saugus High School in 1978, he came to California and attended Rosa Junior College where he ran for two years.

He was recruited to Cal Poly under the auspices of former coach Steve Miller.

And what are Jones' goals for his track season? "I want to break (Emilio) Rios's (Cal Poly) record in the Steeple Chase." No big deal. He ran the Steeple Chase in the Olympics for Puerto Rico.

Bone spurs removed from Reuss' heel

Veteran left-hander Jerry Reuss of the Los Angeles Dodgers will undergo minor surgery Friday to remove bone spurs from both heels. The National League team announced Wednesday.

The surgery will be performed by Dr. William Wagner at nearby St. Joseph's Hospital.

Reuss will resume his winter workout program in approximately six weeks, the Dodgers said.

Mustang Daily — Stephanie Pingel

Kevin Jones tries to get back into old form. Jones took the past two years off and is returning under the added pressure of work.

O'Meara could overtake Watson in money totals

PENSACOLA, Fla. (AP) — Tom Watson, who chose to play in Japan this week, is in danger of losing his position atop the standings in the Player of the Year and money-winning races during this final week of the PGA Tour's official season.

The money-winning, Vardon Trophy and Player of the Year races close with the $300,000 Pensacola Open, which begins Thursday at Perdido Bay.

Watson, seeking to become the first man to win six Player of the Year awards, is tied with South African Denis Watson in the complicated point standings which determine that designation. Each has 54 points. Mark O'Meara has 53 points.

In the money-winning race, Tom Watson has a $10,387 lead over Mark O'Meara. Tom Watson, his season completed, has $476,260. O'Meara is second with $465,873, followed by Andy Bean with $22,995 and Denis Watson with $107,902. O'Meara, Bean and Denis Watson all are competing in the Pensacola Open.

The race for the Vardon Trophy, which goes to the player with the low stroke average on the tour, also closes this week with the absent Cal Peete a big leader. Peete has a 70.56 average. O'Meara, the only other player with a chance to overtake him, has a 70.71 average and can beat Peete only by compiling a score of 266 (18 under par) or better in this tournament.

O'Meara has a much better chance of overtaking Tom Watson in the money-winning race, which O'Meara said was "my goal, my target for the year." He needs a finish of sixth or better. With $54,000 going to the Pensacola winner, O'Meara is the only man with a chance of beating Tom Watson in the money race.

The Player of the Year situation is much more complicated. Points are awarded (20 for first, 18 for second and so on, down to two for 10th) for positions in the top 10 in both money-winnings and stroke average. A victory in this tournament is worth 10 points.

In the most simple situations, Denis Watson and O'Meara can control their own fortunes. Should Denis Watson win the tournament, he wins Player of the Year; should O'Meara win the tournament, he wins Player of the Year.

Lakers and Riley sign agreement

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — Pat Riley, who has guided the Los Angeles Lakers into the National Basketball Association's Championship Series in each of his three years as the team's head coach, has signed a multi-year contract to continue in that capacity, it was announced Wednesday.

In addition, owner Jerry Buss of the Lakers said in a release that Bill Bertka and Dave Wohl have each signed contracts to continue to serve as assistant coaches for the team.

No terms of the agreements were announced.

According to published reports, Riley and Buss agreed on salary terms of the multi-year deal about a month ago, but complications arose over the wording of incentive clauses.

The announcement of the signings of Riley, Bertka and Wohl came just three days before the Lakers open the 1984-85 season at San Antonio.

Riley, 38, is the first coach in NBA history to take his club into the league finals in his first three years as coach. His regular-season winning record of 162-73 gives him a winning percentage of .689, second-highest in league history.

Riley, an All-American at the University of Kentucky, played in the NBA for nine years, five of them with the Lakers. He was a member of Los Angeles' league championship team of 1971-72.

The Lakers lost to the Boston Celtics in the 1983-84 NBA Championship Series. Los Angeles won the league title in 1981-82, Riley's first season, and lost to Philadelphia in the finals the following campaign.

Series MVP injured

NEW YORK (AP) — The way he was limping Wednesday, Alan Trammell hardly looked like the World Series' Most Valuable Player.

But he's got the car, awarded annually by major league baseball and Sport Magazine, to prove that he really was the best player in the series.

Trammell picked up his MVP trophy just four days after Dr. James Andrews performed arthroscopic surgery on the Detroit shortstop's left knee and right shoulder.

"I feel very good," Trammell said. "I had the surgery last Friday and I'm off the crutches already. I'm moving my shoulder around."

Raiders play 7-1 Denver

MANHATTAN BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Statistically speaking, the Denver Broncos have the look of also-rans. Yet they're 7-1 and tied for first place with the Los Angeles Raiders atop the American Football Conference's Western Division.

Coach Tom Flores of the Raiders, whose club faces the Broncos on Sunday in one of the most important games of the National Football League season up to now, believes the Broncos' record is no fluke.

"Statistics can be very misleading," Flores said Wednesday at his weekly meeting with reporters. "You look at their offensive statistics and you'd think they were 1-7.

"(But) they're not doing it with mirrors. They have good players. I'm not surprised by their having a good record. I've always respected them. They've always had a good defense."

In terms of yardage allowed, Denver's defense isn't that good; it currently ranks 18th in the NFL.

However, compared to the Broncos' offense, it's excellent. Through its eight games, the Denver offense has totaled only 2,288 yards, fewer than any of the league's other 27 teams.

Yet the Broncos have allowed only 99 points, best in the NFL, while scoring 163.

"Teams move the ball against them but have a very tough time scoring," Flores said.

Sisters of volleyball player die in crash

After flying to Utah for a three-day weekend of concentrated volleyball playing, punctuated by two great wins and a disappointing loss, the Mustang women's volleyball team returned to LAX Sunday to be greeted with some unexpected and shocking news.

Last Friday, as the team was struggling in vain against the then-15th-ranked BYU, two sisters of top-ranked Mustang spiker Ellen Bugalski were killed in a car accident in Mexico.

Bugalski's father, Bob, met the team at the airport when he was purchasing an airplane ticket to Tijuana to claim the bodies of Leslie and Mary Bugalski and Ellen chose to fly down with him. The two returned to their hometown of Aptos Wednesday.

According to Capt. Miguel Costero of the Mexican Highway Patrol in Tijuana, Mary, 23, and Leslie, 25, were traveling north of Rosarito Beach on the toll road to Ensenada, in the rain, Friday evening, in a van driven by Will Childer, 24, San Diego.

Childer reportedly was driving at an unsafe speed, crossed the center divider, collided with another van driven by Ricardo Sandez Alvarez, 37, Ensenada, and his van exploded into flames killing the sisters and two other passengers. Childer and another passenger suffered third-degree burns and are reported in serious condition Monday. Alvarez and his wife died later of massive head injuries and their daughter was listed in serious condition, Costero said.

Bugalski's coach Mike Wilton said the news was devastating to the whole team and although he's not sure when she will return to play, he felt she was handling the situation well. "I think she's doing well, she's sounding pretty good."

The sisters were both graduated from San Diego State University and lived in San Diego. They were well known to Wilton as great supporters of the Mustang women. "They used to come to the games, especially when we played in San Diego," he said. "On behalf of the entire team, we're very, very upset about it."

The sisters are survived by their parents, Ellen and one brother. Funeral services will be held Friday evening in Aptos.

Saratoga Six's surgery 'perfect'

ARCADIA, Calif. (AP) — Saratoga Six underwent a 3½-hour operation Wednesday at the Southern California Equine Foundation at Santa Anita that "went just perfect," according to the veterinarians who performed the surgery.

The 2-year-old colt, who appeared on the threshold of a brilliant future in thoroughbred racing, had been given no better than a 50-50 chance of surviving the operation after suffering shattered sesamoids in his front left ankle two days earlier.

Saratoga Six won all four of his starts before suffering the career-ending injury in a workout Monday morning at Santa Anita. The son of Alydar was considered the top 2-year-old on the West Coast and a solid contender for Triple Crown honors next year.

A team of five doctors and two technicians performed the surgery.

"It went just perfect," said Greg Ferraro, a local veterinarian who with Dr. Larry Bramlage, a specialist in this type of delicate surgery, headed the procedure. "It went as well as if you had planned it all out."

Doctors implanted 20 screws in the front left ankle of the colt, who was brought back to trainer D. Wayne Lukas' barn Wednesday afternoon in a fiberglass cast.

Bramlage, 33, flew in from Ohio State University to operate. It was a procedure called a fetlock arthrodesis, or a "joint fusion," that he developed five years ago. Saratoga Six was the fourth horse to undergo such an operation.

Another member of the team was Dr. Gene Steffey, an anesthesiologist from UC Davis.

Doctors were concerned that complications could arise if the colt had suffered damage to his blood vessels, which would diminish circulation. But such a worry proved unfounded.

"He bled well during surgery, which is a good sign," Bramlage said.
